Dominic Dobson

National Club Auto Director, America's Car Museum

Dominic Dobson has had a long career in all types of auto racing. He has competed in seven consecutive Indianapolis 500 mile races, 66 CART/PPG Indy Car World Series races over a 10-year span, as well as five 24 Hours of Daytona events and the 1989 24 Hours of LeMans. He also fielded a Chrysler factory team and drove to second place in the North American Touring Car Championship in 1996, and the NASCAR Craftsman

Truck Series in 1998. Dobson won the "Fastest Rookie in History" award at Indy in 1988 and was the 1986 CART "Rookie of the Year".

Prior to racing on the Indy car circuit, he raced karts as a youngster and later taught as an instructor at the Bondurant School of High Performance Driving. Dobson is the former President of Cavallino Holdings, Ltd., an international vintage auto collection and was a co-founder of PacWest Racing Group, where he was both a driver and Vice-President/GM.

He has done television commercials for Texaco/Havoline, AC Delco and Hollywood Cigarettes of Brazil and has appeared on numerous television and radio programs, most recently on the Speed Channel, National Geographic, the Discovery Channel and National Public Radio. Dobson has been a judge at the Kirkland Concours for the past eight years, judging post-war Ferrari's and other European and American competition cars.

Dobson is currently the National Club Auto Director at LeMay – America's Car Museum, the world's foremost car automotive museum located in Tacoma, WA. He is the former President/CEO of Motion Research Corporation and Chairman of the International Race of Executives, benefitting Children's Hospital. He resides in Bellevue, WA and has two children, Kayleigh, 18 and Aidan, 15. His personal website is www.dobsonmotorsport.com
