You might recall a little movie that came out in 1978 called Animal House about a college fraternity that tries to overthrow the college administration in retaliation for their fraternity shut down. The cult classic was deemed by the United States Library of Congress as culturally significant and was selected for preservation in the National Film Registry.

In the movie, a black 1966 Lincoln Continental is converted into the parade crashing "Deathmobile". Originally from the Barris Star Car Collection, the car was recently donated to the Museum by Bill Cotter of Seattle and is now on display at the LeMay Museum at Marymount and will become part of the Museum's permanent collection - most likely to be parked next to the Flintstone Mobile.

Volunteers Needed

As you may know, we're getting ready for two major auctions this summer in addition to breaking ground for the new home of the LeMay Collection. We have many cars that need to be moved from remote locations, the LeMay Grounds and Marymount to be "re-shuffled" in preparation for construction and the new Museum's Grand Opening. We are currently in need of help in preparing these cars for the auction and to be displayed in the new Museum.
