TACOMA, Wash. (Sept. 21, 2018) – Honda's iconic "You meet the nicest people on a Honda" advertising campaign is widely credited in changing cultural views on motorcycles more than a half-century ago and bringing the joy of two-wheeled motoring to the masses. To celebrate the company's history, LeMay – America's Car Museum (ACM) is featuring 125 bikes from the collection of Master Collector Brown M. Maloney.

Maloney, who owns and operates three radio stations in Washington state, is a lifelong auto and motorcycle enthusiast whose collection includes many Mercedes-Benzes, Ferraris, Fords and vintage Honda motorcycles. America's Car Museum recently recognized him as a Master Collector as part of the Wheels & Heels Annual Gala, which was organized by America's Automotive Trust (AAT) – a not-for-profit dedicated to securing America's automotive heritage.

With more than 125 Hondas in the new display, visitors to the Museum can view this unrivalled assortment of motorbikes, including notable ones such as a 1952 Honda Cubby "Bicycle Motor" with Original Bicycle, 1962 CB-92 125cc Sport Bike with Race Accessories, 1979 CBX Six Cylinder and 1983 CX-650 Turbo.

"The Master Collectors selected by ACM embody what it means to be a true aficionado," said ACM President and COO Paul E. Miller. "Brown's lifelong passion for vintage vehicles, especially Honda motorcycles, serves as a bright light in the collector community. We are humbled to be able to share such an assortment with guests to the Museum."

To date, ACM has awarded the Master Collector designation to eight people, including Nicola Bulgari, Ken and Patty McBride, Peter Hageman, Al McEwan, Glenn Mounger, Steven R. Plaster, Peter Gleeson and Dale Chihuly.
