

AMERICA'S CAR MUSEUM®

A lifelong car enthusiast, Brad Phillips has worked tirelessly to integrate his love of the collector car hobby into every facet of his professional and personal life. He has owned and restored over thirty cars from the nickel era through American muscle, a host of British and European sports cars from the '60's through the '80s, and even the Japanese home market. A veteran Great Racer and long-distance touring expert, Brad has created and participated in some of the most incredible driving experiences in the United States and abroad. Beginning with a career in the tech sector, Brad made the decision to move to the world of collector car insurance in 2003, first as the founder of one of the largest Allstate & Hagerty insurance agencies in Colorado, then in 2009 through a host of sales management, marketing, events, and business development positions at Hagerty corporate. In addition to his professional accomplishments, Brad is an active contributor to the fabric of the hobby. He has performed the duties of Master of Ceremonies for events including the Concours of America and the Boca Raton Concours, as well as moderating countless educational seminars and expert panels in the United States, Europe, and online. Brad was the star of a YouTube series related to the restoration of his personal Sunbeam Tiger, and is a regular feature author for Hagerty Media on his various projects and hobby related musings. His favorite place is behind the wheel, and his mission is to share the message of inclusivity and friendship this hobby brings to the world. He is a 1992 graduate of the University of Alabama at Birmingham, and proudly serving his third term as commissioner on the Historic District Commission of Salisbury, Maryland. He has been married for 21 years to his wife, Dr. Maida Finch, and has two teenage children currently learning how to drive manual transmissions.
