John Miller Hot Shop Live Glass Artwork

In 2012, renowned glassworker John Miller and the Museum of Glass Hot Shop team created nine sculptures inspired by hood ornaments from the 1920's through the 1950's entitled "Classic Heat". They will be displayed at the Museum of Glass and LeMay-America's Car Museum. The custom made, hand-blown works are 25-inches tall and were influenced by vehicles that will be on display at ACM including the 1952 Buick 8 Special, 1957 Chevy 210 and the 1929 Ford Model A. While the sculptures reference the original emblems, the finished pieces include elements from various makes and models.

During the Hot Shop Live Show on June 18, John Miller will create another piece from the classic heat series. It will have some of the same metallic surfaces and auto body references. Miller is known for creating artwork inspired by Americana. In the past he has created large-scale food and beverage items such as hamburgers, hotdogs, wings, and soft drinks. Also, Miller has made giant screwdrivers and car keys referencing the hot rod era of the 1950's. John Miller is an associate professor of glass at Illinois State University and exhibits his work internationally.

Two Old Madeiras and Two Old Scots

Six of you will join ACM President and CEO David Madeira along with ACM Board Chairman Corry McFarland for an extraordinary evening of dining at America's Car Museum's private members-only Weyerhaeuser Concours Club. Begin the evening with El Gaucho's sommelier selection of white wine followed by a special chef's menu of Gaucho signature items. Your meal will be paired with a 12 and 15-year old Macallan scotch and will conclude with an 1885 Madeira elegant fortified wine and Montecristo cigars. As avid collectors of vintage Madeira wine and Scotch, David and Corry will share stories about the histories of their collections.

Madeira Wine and Macallan Scotch - The Facts: D'Oliveira is one of the most prestigious "houses" producing Madeira on the Madeira Islands and one of the few still with significant stores of its own "Family Reserve" wines. As a Family Reserve wine this wine remained in original cask until the 1960's or 70s when it was bottled. Madeira has a long history in America being the principal wine consumed by members of the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia to write our Constitution. The signing of the Constitution was accompanied by a toast with Madeira wine. The Verdelho style is lighter and drier than other styles. It is complex and delightful as aperitif or after dinner wine.

Based in Scotland since 1824, Macallan Estate's single malt remains the malt against which all others are judged.

2001 Cinnamon Macchia by Dale Chihuly

Macchia, the Italian word for “spot”, is the chosen name for one of Dale Chihuly’s most dynamic series. Macchia is color, layer upon layer, one for the interior, another for the exterior, along with a contrasting lip wrap, dusts and small chunks of glass called “jimmies”. “Unbelievable combinations of color—that was the driving force,” says Chihuly of his creation of the Macchia series.

Cinnamon Macchia, a Chihuly Workshop 2001 Studio Edition, represents his earlier work in this dramatic series. Its oddly shaped, yellow form is dusted with a red pigment and has a clear body wrap, with blue jimmies added to give the spotted effect. Each piece is approximately 6 inches tall and signed by the artist. Accompanying this hand-blown Chihuly is a handsome Plexiglas case for display and a book, Chihuly alla Macchia. The fifty-four page publication is introduced by art historian Richard Hobbs and includes close-up photographs of the glass and fifteen of Chihuly’s drawings related to the series.

Cinnamon Macchia is a classic example of Chihuly’s obsession with color and his insatiable desire to experiment.
